3. OLD BUSINESS:

A. Review of Potential Outreach Questions

Mr. Purcell summarized some of the draft questions and suggested that only a few questions should be used for interviews as they generate long answers and conversations. There was discussion about what the Committee hopes to learn from these questions. It was suggested that the same questions should be asked of all business owners for comparison. It was noted that any questions not asked during outreach interviews could be packaged into an online survey for broader use.

Chair Winny highlighted a few questions he felt would provide useful information for the Committee, such as what services do you feel are missing from the neighborhood and why business owners chose West Lebanon Village and what would keep them there.

It was suggested that a basic script be prepared outlining why the questions are being asked and to help focus the conversation toward whether or how respondents see their business or property contributing to the revitalization of West Lebanon. It was noted that different questions should be asked of business owners as opposed to the general community and that it was important to avoid re-asking questions from prior efforts. The Committee should ask questions that generate actionable ideas and information, not just questions that are interesting.

It was suggested that the goal of asking questions should be to communicate the Committee's mission and should include asking whether respondents are open to follow-up questions. Additional information can be gathered from those who express an interest in further participation. It was noted that the Committee has a limited time to work and they should get to the point as directly as possible.

Barbara Krinitz, resident of Ward 1, suggested open-ended questions would generate the most useful information, as opposed to yes or no questions.

Dan Winny, resident of Ward 3, suggested sending the entire list to people with an introductory paragraph explaining the goal and requesting a brief written response. The Committee could follow-up in person with those who express an interest in participating further. Others agreed with sending the entire list and those who are interested will participate and those who aren't interested won't participate.

There was discussion about whether the community has any control over the types of businesses that occur in order to promote uses that achieve positive change. It was noted that the City has almost no control and has to promote what it wants and be prepared to live with what it doesn't want in the near term.

It was suggested that there should be a personal outreach effort to ensure communication with certain property or business owners. There was further discussion about whether to send all questions or a limited subset. There was concern that sending too many questions could decrease the number of responses.

Mr. Amaro shared suggestions for marketing and outreach via social media and public outreach, including visual and tangible efforts to draw attention to their efforts. Chair Winny suggested including this on a future agenda for further discussion.

Mr. Clem shared a preliminary concept website he'd created that could potentially be used for communications, surveys, news, ideas, etc. He noted there is so much interest in what is happening in West Lebanon, the Committee need to capture that enthusiasm and civic pride. There was support for getting a website posted soon. Mr. Brooks was asked to look into the development and use of a private website outside of the City's website to avoid any conflicts.

Chair Winny suggested creating a survey of most of the draft questions including whether respondents are interested in further participation? Ms. Stavis offered to help with the effort.

B. Review of Concept Parking Sketch

Mr. Winny briefly described his sketch plan for parking behind the buildings on the east side of Main Street. He noted the total number of spaces would likely be lower after accommodating other business needs.

Mr. Purcell described pending plans for 14 and 28 Main Street in relation to the parking concept. There was a suggestion of tying the effort to communicate about the parking project with the other outreach efforts discussed earlier.

Barbara Krinitz asked for clarification about mixed uses and Mr. Purcell described his plans. Committee members expressed support for Mr. Purcell's efforts to redevelop two Main Street properties.

Mr. Purcell suggested it would be more sincere and effective to reach out personally to the handful of property owners involved in the parking project as opposed sending them a letter or survey.

Ms. Stavis left meeting at 7:02pm

There was discussion about the importance of streetscape improvements compared to additional parking. Mr. Brooks noted that parking behind the buildings and the proposed streetscape improvements along Main Street are connected. Since many people already believe that parking is insufficient, adding parking behind the buildings is a way to provide space and flexibility to make the desired streetscape improvements without losing more parking on Main Street.

The following agenda items were taken out of order and are presented in the order discussed.

5. OTHER BUSINESS:

A. Discussion of Subcommittee Structure

Mr. Brooks summarized the basic requirements of the Right-To-Know law for notice, posting, and keeping minutes of meetings and when they apply. There was discussion and consensus to dispense with the formal subcommittee structure and to assign individual members with tasks for research between meetings and reporting back to the full body at subsequent meetings.

4. NEW BUSINESS:

A. Process for Developing a Vision Statement

Dan Winny noted that the 2020 Visioning Study report outlines a vision and lists some specific actions and champions. He recommended having Committee members review the final report prior to the next meeting to discuss where the Committee wants to put its efforts. Mr. Brooks will provide the Committee with a brief status update on the Master Plan actions and strategies and the Visioning Study implementation strategies for the next meeting.

Mr. Brooks provided a brief update on the status of the ongoing Streetscape Study and its intended goals.

6. ADJOURNMENT:

A MOTION by Mr. Clem to adjourn the meeting.

Seconded by Mr. Purcell.
